G-MEN CAPTURE ROBINSON, LAST "BIG NAME" FOE

Kentuckian Is Arrested On Soda Clerk's Tip In California

STOLL KIDNAPER IS FACING DEATH

Carried $4,200 of Stoll Ransom Cash At Time Of Capture

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 12.—The government checked the last big name from its list of hunted "public enemies" today as a flying squad of justice agents sped Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., to Louisville, Ky., to stand trial for his life in the kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll. In a cleanup coup at Glendale, Calif., last night, J. Edgar Hoover's men seized the pasty-faced youth with a penchant for dressing in women's clothes and a checkered past that included terms in a college and two insane asylums.

No Shots Fired

The 29-year-old Robinson, often called the "Lone Wolf kidnaper", surrendered without firing a shot and was hustled aboard a plane bound for Louisville. There, Federal Attorney Bunc Gardner announced that he would seek the death penalty and fight any defense plea of insanity. Mrs. Stoll, wife of Berry Stoll, wealthy oil man, was slugged with a lead pipe before being taken from her home in the $50,000 kidnaping in the fall of 1934. The federal law provides a death penalty when a kidnaper victim suffers bodily harm. The seizure of Robinson was the climax of an 11-day campaign of swift raids in which federal agents recaptured Alvin Karpis, Harry Campbell and William Mahan. A wide-awake Pasadena soda clerk apparently gave the agents the tip that led to Robinson's capture. The clerk, Lynn Allen, noted that a "woman" customer spoke in a mumble in an evident attempt to disguise "her" voice.

Spots Auto Number
Glancing at "her" wrists, he noted that they were "thick" and her neck "mannish". So he told the police of his suspicions and gave them the number of the customer's sedan.

Soon after the capture, the agents of the federal bureau of investigation flashed the word to their chief here. Hoover was attending a prize fight, but he left it instantly and called reporters to his office. "We've got Robinson," he smiled. "Took him in Glendale, Cal." "He admitted his identity and will be removed immediately to Louisville. When taken, he had $4,200 on his person, of which $4,200 was Stoll ransom money." "Any shots fired?" he was asked. "No shots were fired. But Robinson was carrying a .38 caliber revolver when he was arrested." "Was he dressed like a woman at the time of his arrest?" "No," Hoover replied, "but he'd grown a mustache."

Hoover said the ex-law clerk had been living in Glendale for two months, under the name of "John Sims". The "blonde woman" disguise attributed to him was reported from many cities at various times of the hunt. A lack of lobes on his ears was the only distinguished physical characteristic of the six-foot youth from Nashville, Tenn.

VALLEE'S WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE

Fay Webb Brings to End In Court Disagreement Of Three Years

(By Associated Press)
LOS ANGELES, May 12.—Rudy Vallee's former "dream girl" steered their broken romance toward a divorce court today to make final their sensational disagreement of three years ago.

Fay Webb, dark-eyed daughter of the Santa Monica police chief, charged the curly-haired orchestra leader with cruelty in a complaint preceded by what her attorney, Ben C. Cohen, termed a "satisfactory and amicable adjustment of their financial affairs."

Cohen said Vallee would not contest the divorce.

The suit virtually ended a five-year story of marriage spotted with bickering, alleged boy friends and girl friends, fond occasions of making up again and renewed farewells.

Reach High Point

The couple's difficulties reached a high point soon after their separation in April 1933, when Mrs. Vallee sought to have voided an agreement under which she received $100 a week.

Again testimony that Vallee misrepresented his financial condition when his wife signed the agreement, his counsel at that time sought to show that she was indiscreet with Gary Leon, Adagio dancer.

The divorce suit made no mention of any other woman in Vallee's life, nor of the dancer. The complaint of the band leader's wife recited a series of incidents to show his "ungovernable temper," "great emotional outbursts," and roving theatrical life impaired her health, destroyed her peace of mind and made her lose weight.

West Virginia—State-wide primaries of both parties to pick convention delegates, and candidates for state offices and senatorial nominations.

Delaware and North Dakota—State convention to pick Republican convention delegates.

BY LEONARD B. SHUBERT.

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Ohio's broad political arena, scene of preliminary skirmishing for many months, became today a central theater of operations for warring factions of both major parties.

Observers in the capitol awaited the results as voters of the fourth most populous state balloted in the Democratic and Republican primaries.

In addition to presidential entries there were complete slates for state, legislative, judicial and county offices.

On the Republican side the prime struggle was the presidential contest between Senator Borah of Idaho and Robert A. Taft, "favorite son" entry was assured at least 17 of the 52 convention delegates because Taft was entered in all districts, while Borah forces were entered in only 35 contests.

On the Democratic side President Roosevelt was opposed by Harry Breckinridge of New York, who previously lost to the chief executive in Maryland and Pennsylvania. Breckinridge seeks only presidential preferential votes and is not entered against the president in the separate balloting for national convention delegates.

Borah also is entered in today's West Virginia primary election, which is expected to bring out 400,000 voters because of a struggle between the state's two Democratic senators, Rush D. Holt and M. M. Neely.

Borah's only opponent there is Leo J. Shassee of Milwaukee, Wis. On the Democratic side President Roosevelt is opposed by Joseph A. Coudemars of New Hampshire.

Innocent Trucker Becomes Involved In Drivers' Strike

(By Associated Press)
CLEVELAND, May 12.—Not knowing a truck drivers' strike was in progress here, Ralph Akers, 23, of Dayton, found himself involved in a skirmish with two men early today.

Accompanied by his wife, Geraldine, Akers drove his truck into the city and was chased by two men in an automobile. He stopped the truck and put up battle with his fists.

When police arrived, he supplied the auto license number of his assailants. Police picked up two suspects. One of them had a black eye.

Akers refused to prosecute. "If I'd known there was a strike," he said, "I'd have gone around the city. I thought they were holdup men." Akers then resumed his trip to Buffalo.

City Cleanup Drive Under Way Today

Service department workers with trucks canvassed a large portion of the city today in the start of Salem's annual cleanup days. The start was made at 7 a. m. on East State st.

Frank Wilson, service director, said sections of the city not covered by the workers today would be reached tomorrow. The roundup will not extend beyond Wednesday, he added.

Citizens have been requested to place the rubbish they wish to have hauled away near the curb in containers. The refuse is being dumped at the disposal plant, northwest of the city.

End of Zep's Record Flight

The majestic Hindenburg, queen of the air, is shown on her arrival in New York after a record-breaking flight from Friedrichshafen, Germany. She clipped nearly twenty hours from the previous Zeppelin mark for travel from Germany to New York, making the long flight from her home base to Lakehurst, N. J., in a little more than sixty hours. This remarkable picture shows the airship sailing over upper New York Bay as dawn began to lighten the sky above the skyscrapers of New York's financial district.

Year's Figures Show Work Of Hospital For Community

Emphasize Need of Support for Community Chest From Which Institution Derives Aid

Salem City hospital took care of 111 more patients during 1935 than during 1934, and gave over $500 more free hospitalization during the past year than in the previous year.

These figures help to reveal the extent to which the hospital participates in community work and the necessity of cooperation of the entire community in making the 1936 Community Chest campaign a success. The City hospital is one of the eight units which will participate in the chest distribution.

The canvass for the benefit of the hospital will be held May 19 and 20 in charge of a committee under the direction of Mrs. E. J. Holbach, president of the Hospital auxiliary, and with members of the auxiliary serving on the committee. The auxiliary works with

Miss Esther Wilson, hospital superintendent, in the various activities of the institution. The auxiliary has members not only in Salem, but also in other towns served by the City hospital. Hospital authorities today submitted the following report showing hospitalization services during the past year as follows:

X-Rays—Non-residents, 304; residents, 212; ambulatory—non-residents, 52; residents, 39; house patients—Lisbon, 133; Leetonia, 45; Columbiana, 81; East Palestine, 80; New Waterford, 29 Berlin Center, 37 Washingtonville, 39; Canfield, 19; Beloit, 19, a total of 478; other towns and villages in northern Columbiana county and southern Mahoning county supplied from one to 18 patients, or a total of 211 additional. Underdahl, a retired navy officer here for a visit with Wood, his cousin, had been taking relatives and neighboring farmers on sight-seeing flights. According to the pleas of his daughter, Ristow went up to give her a ride.

Underdahl banked at an altitude of 500 feet and the plane went into a dive. The pilot and Caroline were dead when neighbors reached the scene. Ristow died in a hospital several hours later.

Underdahl flew the ship from Los Angeles.

THEY STAY GRADUATED

No Moosehead graduate has ever been tried in any court for any infraction of the law.

This statement was delivered by Ad A. Miller of Canton, membership director for the Moose of Ohio, as he addressed members of the Salem Moose lodge on the occasion of the organization's 25th anniversary observance here.

No matter what else the Moose lodge has done, or has not done, this achievement alone—the making of manhood—is more than sufficient to justify the existence of the organization.

The Moose lodge is proud of Mooseheart and its accomplishments, and justly so. And as long as it has this work as its primary objective, it will continue to grow, as it has in the past, meriting the respect and esteem of the public.

A STATE OF MIND

The relief program deficiency bill, which passed the house Monday by a vote of 340 to 37, is not the first proposal to get approval by many congressmen afraid to cast a negative ballot. The fact that many representatives known to be critical of the relief bill voted for it anyway is explained by their natural unwillingness to be classified as hostile to relief beneficiaries. Unfortunately, any disposition to question relief legislation is construed as hostility.

Obviously, a legislator may be critical of a proposal without dissenting from the principle on which the proposal is based. It is a dangerous state of mind in representative government when legislators are afraid to stand up for their convictions on a roll call. The entire procedure is muddled and confused by such timidity. Congressmen who save their skins by climbing aboard the bandwagon apparently do not mind the sacrifice of their integrity. It is a question how long such intellectual dishonesty can be practiced without undermining the foundation of a republican form of government.

THE HAND IS QUICKER

Terrifying as is the sight of a national debt which will reach $34,500,000,000 by the end of next month, there is an aspect of the situation which isn't getting the attention it deserves. The hand is quicker than the eye, as magicians used to say.

Federal social security legislation, in addition to other experimental machinery, sets up in the treasury an old age reserve account. This account has direct bearing on the national debt for the following reasons:

The account will contain approximately $35,000,000,000 by 1965. That happens to be enough to absorb the entire national debt, as of the current fiscal year. Theoretically, in 30 more years the federal government will have collected enough money for old age pensions to buy up all the securities outstanding today.

Furthermore, since the old age reserve account is expected to contain $50,000,000,000 by 1980, it is obvious the government is going to be obliged to find some place to invest that much money. The place probably will be in its own securities. It's possible debt might be created to meet the government's investment requirements.

Thus, assuming the federal debt could be held to a sum equal to the old age reserve—and forgetting that the reserve itself represents a claim on the government—one may be able to assume eventually that the government has no indebtedness. Social security, in short, may be useful for more than its nominal purpose by the time the government gets into the swing of accumulating funds. The possibility shouldn't be neglected. Assuredly, it isn't being neglected by those who are making it their business to understand the ramifications of social security.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, May 12—Johnny Broderick is Broadway's most feared minion of the law. He is the bare-knuckled flattener of wise-guys, sharp shooters and downright toughs. A plain-clothes detective, he is 5 feet 10 inches and weighs around 160. With spats and a cane he could pass for George McManus, the cartoonist.

He's a snappy dresser who came out of a gas house district on the lower East Side. And for a long time talked out of the side of his mouth. He has almost always employed his sidewalk technique of swinging from the ankle in bringing in the boys who think they are bad.

He has the police department's gold medal for personal courage and was the copper who faced the barrage of bullets from the hideaway of the notorious Two Gun Crowley and brought that notorious killer to book. He has been a fool for walking smack into gun-fire.

Despite his bravery, Broderick has never gotten very far in his field. He is still a $3,000-a-year detective. Some say it's departmental politics. Others say he is doing exactly what he wants to do. He is 41 and an especial pal of Jack Dempsey.

James J. Montague fills the traditional role of shy poet in real life. A timid little man with a minaret mind, he shrinks from all public contacts. Not long ago at a reading circle at The Players he tried to read two of his poems, but stumbled and whispered so they had to take his manuscript away and get the robust Clement Wood to follow the lines.

The Ile de France was held for 20 minutes a recent sailing for a belated passenger. As a result, a most exasperated crowd of adepts fairly cheered the late comer when he came scurrying up the gangplank. To stand at a crowded rail for 20 extra minutes with fixed smiles, calling out and gesturing, is not much of a picnic. For the ladies it took many beauty treatments to eradicate the grin lines. Incidentally I hear the longest a liner was ever held was an hour for Myron T. Herrick.

A very learned gentleman and highly successful author writes me interestingly of the new custom among certain writers, Damon Runyon and Hemingway at times, to use the "historic present" tense. He says the writers think it makes things more real, but it doesn't. He thinks the writer using this form is saying what might happen and not what does. "He comes into the room" should be used with if. "He came into the room" is how we would tell it in conversation and that gives the effect of the present. He says the French use the present tense occasionally to change the diction, but he believes it a failure if English. Still Runyon and Hemingway get along fairly well.

Lowell Thomas is among the last of the bowtists. He has worn nothing but the bow since school days up. (Murmuring lady over my shoulder: "Of course it wouldn't read as well dropping that up.") Morris Gest has worn that exaggerated bow-like do-funny for 30 years. George White for many years wore only a black midget bow, not much larger than a seasoned house fly, but lately he has gone expansive and dons an occasional four-in-hand.

I never saw a ghost. The nearest I have come to it is when in such an interlude as that through which I am just passing. I am haunted by a name I cannot quite remember. It hovers about the room, now near, now far, a fluttering arabesque that almost congeals and then suddenly melts. I imagine spooks are something like that.

New York's busiest woman is the white haired magazine editor, Mrs. William Brown Meloney. She works at her two desks 17 hours a day. One desk is at her office and the other at her penthouse in West 67th, where she has a roof garden growing with petunias, planted by notable friends, including Mme. Curie, Jo Davidson, etc.

They found this scribbled bit of doggerel on the reporter's table at one of the boring banquets with a succession of windy speakers:

Often at midnight I shriek in affright,
"Where is Frank Crowninshield dining tonight?"
Then comes the thought as I calm myself down,
Somewhere they're laughing with Charles Hanson Towne.

Literary mystery: How J. L. Hardy could write such a thrilling book as "Everything is Thunder" and follow it with such an unutterably dull volume as "Never in Vain."

For Wednesday, May 13

The planetary positions for this day are conflicting. While there are signs of much liveliness and general activity, yet there is also prospect of a sudden disintegrating and devastating force upsetting things with whirlwind pace. This may obtain rule in the private rather than business life. There may be domestic, social or romantic upheavals of breath-taking suddenness. Be cautious in all affiliations with the opposite sex.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a lively and eventful year, in which all pertaining to writings, publications and promotions should thrive. In private affairs there may be startling adventures or sudden visitations of explosive force. In these and in all sex affiliations be calm and circumspect.

A child born on this day may be versatile and highly talented but may be distracted by sudden and romantic adventures in its private life.

There is something suspicious about the willingness of congress to sit through May. It may be that the congressmen are in no hurry to meet the home folks.—Troy Record.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Headache

There is one human ailment that few of us escape. Almost everybody suffers from an occasional headache. Because of the suffering due to this symptom, some persons are at times unable to work. No matter how slight it may be, its very persistence interferes with happiness and efficiency.

For one who is troubled this way, it is wise to watch the diet. Simple foods, including fresh fruits and vegetables, lessen the work of the digestive organs. Persistent headache may sometimes be traced to a disturbance in the nasal sinuses. These are the bony cavities that open into the nose and are lined with mucous membrane identical and continuous with that lining the nasal passages.

The openings from the sinuses into the nose are very narrow. Because of this fact, if the tissues in that region become congested and swollen, the passages are closed. Then the secretions are dammed back, the sinus cavities failing to drain. It is not long until there is enough pressure to produce pain with great distress.

Eyestrain as Cause

Sinus trouble, when it is really the cause of the headache, is likely to cause morning pain. Later in the day the swelling grows less and the secretions drain away, relieving the pressure. Often there is difficulty in reading and doing fine work. This indicates that the headache comes from eyestrain.

It is surprising how much discomfort results from strained eyes, headache being one of its conspicuous symptoms. In all probability there is a need for glasses.

It is a common thing, too, to have nausea and loss of appetite from uncorrected eyestrain. Many a person goes about half sick, when all the symptoms would disappear by wearing the proper glasses. It is probable, in this case, they would need to be worn for close work only.

We are not likely to suffer from any unpleasant symptoms, or to be conscious of our bodies, if we live as we should. When from any cause the powers of resistance are lowered, then it is that eyestrain or sinus trouble or temporary lack of elimination will produce discomfort.

I wish I could impress upon every reader the importance of sunlight, fresh air, a reasonable amount of exercise, plain food and plenty of sleep. Then if the elimination is watched and any apparent physical defect, corrected, our lives will be comfortable and happy.

"THERE'S MURDER IN THE AIR"

by ROY CHANSLOR

CHAPTER XVIII

Nat paused and picked up the manila envelope from the table.

"I have had copies made of pictures which appeared with the news-stories," he went on. He took these from the envelope and handed them to Gordon. Tyler bent forward to look at them too. Gordon stared at them dully.

"This one," Nat said, placing his finger on one of the copies, "is a picture of Joe Gaudio. This is the kidnapped boy. And this—is James Moridon."

Tyler peered at the pictures. Gaudio, as far as he knew, he had never seen. The picture of the kidnapped boy revealed an eager-faced, smiling lad. It was the third picture, that of James Moridon, which brought a startled exclamation to his lips.

"Why that picture is the image of your son, Mr. Gordon, as he is today!"

Gordon nodded slowly, his head bent over the pictures. Then Nat bent his eyes to Nat's. Bitter and pain shown from them, none all the more because of the complete lack of emotion in his face.

"I am James Moridon," he said. "My son David was the boy who was kidnapped."

Tyler stared at the picture of James Moridon, and then at the one he had known as Gordon. It was certainly not the same face. Gordon, observing the puzzlement in his eyes, gave a little sigh.

"I was in the war," he said slowly. "I was badly wounded. My face was horribly mutilated. What you see now—is the result of plastic surgery."

Nat gave a sudden exclamation. "Of course! Now I understand! That was the one thing missing!"

Gordon sank back and regarded Tyler from eyes which seemed suddenly sunken, without luster. He threw up his hands, then, with a quick gesture.

"I've kept this a secret," he said heavily. "From everyone but David—and my wife. Because I knew that as long as Joe Gaudio lived, none of us were ever to be safe from the shadow of death. That if ever it became known that I was James Moridon, this man would search me out—and kill me! I don't know the power of hate in that gangster's soul."

Tyler's face was filled with compassion as he turned to the man.

"I begin to understand," he said. "The music of the violin overhead which had been so soft, so caressing, now rose, suddenly, for an instant, and then, on a discord which was like a cry, it stopped. The eyes of the three men jerked upward, staring.

Nat and Tyler sprang to their feet, started for the stairs. From above they heard a sound of hurrying steps. At the top of the stairs the blind girl appeared, the violin hanging in her hand, her face deadly white.

Nat ran to her as she swayed. "Helene!" she gasped. "Helene!" Gordon, who had sat as if frozen, rose trembling.

"Good God!" he cried. "Go to her—quickly," Ruth said, harshly. "She—she's in terrible danger!"

She gripped the banisters, held herself erect.

"Go!" she commanded. "I'm all right!"

Nat whirled about, took the steps in a bound. As he flung himself out of the door, he heard the other men following. Across the moonlight lawn he raced, his eyes going to the house. A light burned on the second floor.

Helene's room was dark. Reaching a spot under her window, not delaying to go around through door and stairs and halls, he sprang upward, hands clutching for the edge of the balcony. They caught, and he pulled himself up, vaulted the rail, pushed forward toward the open French windows, making no effort at silence, intent only on getting to the girl's side, oblivious of possible danger to himself.

As he came up to the window, he heard a sound from within, of some one stirring. There was a click, and the reading-lamp by the girl's bed came on, revealing her frightened face turned toward him, and beyond her, a sudden movement of heavy curtains. As he stared, a small black pistol appeared from between the folds of the curtains.

"Helene!" he shouted at the top of his voice. Then he was lunging through the windows into the room. As he lurched toward those curtains, toward the spot where he had seen that black pistol, there flashed through his mind the astonishing fact that his invasion of the room had not set off the burglar-alarm.

He heard the shot, and at the same time felt a searing, stabbing pain. He clawed at the curtains, tried to hold himself erect.

He heard Helene scream terribly, half turned his head, saw Tyler hurt himself into the room. Then the curtains gave way, and Nat plunged sidewise, through an open door, went down, clutching at his breast. The last thing he saw was Doris, framed in the open doorway across the room, her eyes wide. Then darkness engulfed him.

Halfway down the stairs of the cottage Ruth stood, clutching at the banister with one hand, holding her violin to her with the other. Then she heard the shot. For one suspended moment Nat's mind revealed itself to her. Pain—sudden stabbing pain. And then a name, etched in his brain in utter bewilderment—Doris! Immediately afterward—blankness.

The blind girl gave a little gasp. "Nat!" she moaned. "Nat!"

A dreadful certainty, then: Nat had been shot!

From some inner reserve she found strength, controlled her rioting nerves. She raised her head firmly, her face filled with determination. Then, scarcely feeling her way, so powerful was her instinct, she was descending the stairs, the violin and bow still in her hands.

She collided with the table in the living-room, quickly put her violin down, fumbled ahead of her and made her way to the door. Impatiently she opened it, stumbled into the garden. She stopped for an instant, listening, trying to orient herself, for she had never made the trip from cottage to house without aid.

Then she began to hurry directly toward the house. Her outstretched fingers touched the bark of a tree. She veered around it without mishap and hastened her steps. She brought up against the edge of one of the stone benches with a little exclamation of pain, a pain which was instantly forgotten for her purpose—to get to Nat as fast as she could.

Then, oblivious of the bushes which clutched at her filmy negligee, and scratched her flesh, she was hurrying toward the house, toward where, she knew now, Nat lay unconscious—perhaps dead! That blackness which had closed in on his mind terrified her. She began to call his name. Then she was free of the garden, felt the solid lawn under her feet, and was running.

Gordon, unable to scale the balcony behind Tyler, had run around to the front door and was pressing the bell frantically. He heard Ruth calling, turned and saw her flying across the lawn. A steamer-chair lay directly in her path. Gordon called out sharply and she hesitated. Then he ran to her, took her arm.

"Take me to Nat, quickly!" she implored.

He guided her swiftly to the steps, helped her onto the porch. The door opened suddenly and Johnson peered out. Seeing them, he ran to Ruth and took her other arm. They led the girl inside. Her great eyes were wide with fear and worry. From above they heard a woman moaning hysterically.

Helene Gordon gave an exclamation and sprang up the stairs ahead of them. The blind girl strained to follow. Johnson, speaking to her in a soothing voice, assisted her up the stairs.

Gordon ran to Helene's room, toward the sound of her sobs. As he entered the door he saw Carlotta bending over her. The girl was sitting bolt upright, blankly staring, held in the grip of hysteria, her shoulders shaking with the sobs which racked her body. Gordon heard his wife's voice, then. She was trying to calm Helene. He ran to his daughter, put his arms about her. She seemed not to recognize him.

"She's hysterical," said Carlotta. "But she's not hurt. Some one—some one shot Nat."

Gordon straightened quickly. Voices came through the door from the other room. He stepped over the crumpled curtains. Nat lay on the floor. Tyler, bent over him on one knee, was ripping away his shirt.

Doris, a book clutched to her breast, was staring down at Nat, eyes dilated. Ruth, on Johnson's arm, came into the room.

"Father! Nat!" she cried.

Tyler looked up, spoke quietly, reassuringly. "Nat's all right, darling. It's only a flesh wound."

Doris gave a little sob of relief. Ruth, disdaining Johnson's aid, made her way to her father, sank to her knees beside Nat, caressed his face with her hands, murmured his name. David was at the telephone, urging Dr. Grace to come at once.

Nelson and Harrigan entered from the hallway, stared at Nat. Tyler quietly reassured them. Nelson turned to Gordon.

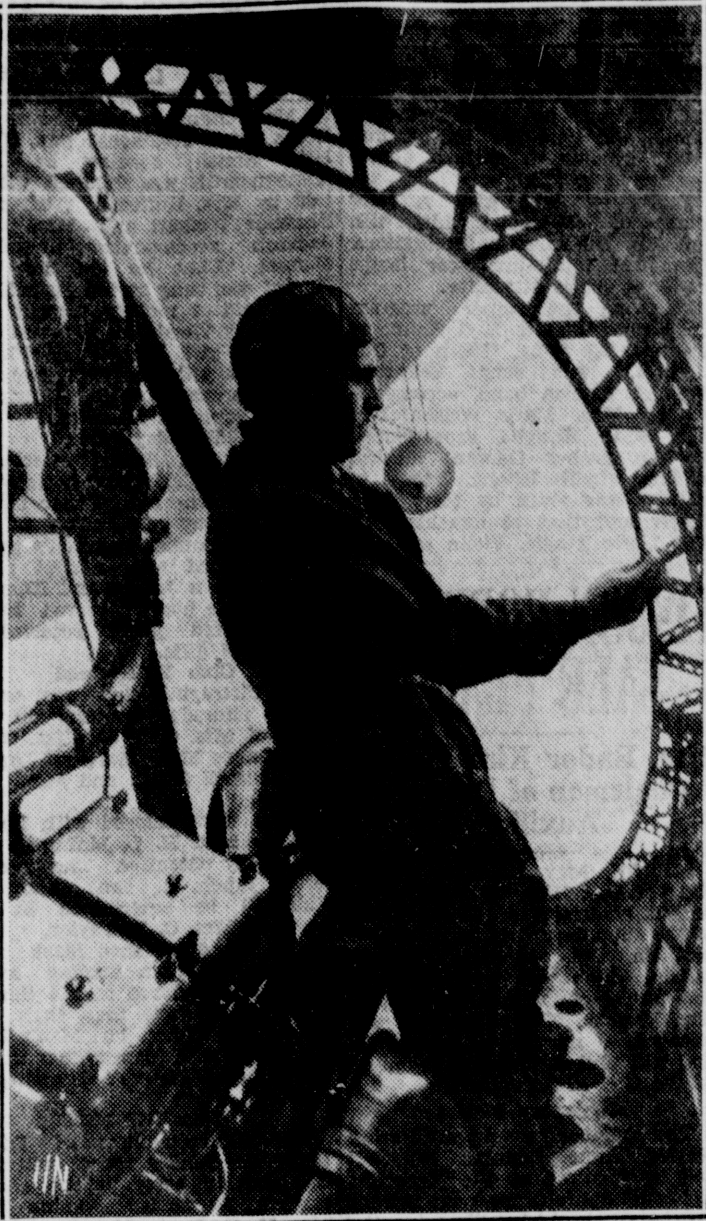

"He'll never get away this time," he said.

Harrigan nodded emphatically. "We've got this place sewed up like a sack," he declared.

Johnson emerged from the bathroom with towels, bandages and alcohol. He bent over Nat. Quickly, expertly he began to clean the wound. Gordon heard him talk from the sobbing girl, and placed her own arms about her shoulders. Gordon placed his hand under Helene's chin, lifted her face. It was still blank and staring.

While Doris caressed her, he spoke to her gently, soothingly. The girl made no response. David entered.

Air Queen's Motor Roars

A mechanic is shown in the gondola of the German airliner Hindenburg. This remarkable picture was made as the airship neared its home base on returning from her maiden trip to South America.

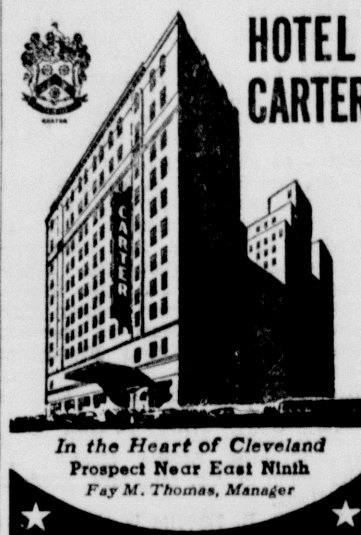

Gordon shook his head emphatically. "No, no," he said. "There was nobody there. I was outside, on the lawn, when I heard the shot. I could see clearly in the moonlight. There was nobody on the balcony when the shot was fired."

Opening %-% higher, May 94%, July 88%-1%, wheat soon reacted, and in some cases went well below yesterday's finish. Corn started unchanged to 1/4 up, May 62%, and then eased.

Harry Calladine, Leader At End of First Half of Singles, Unable to Maintain Pace and Falls Down to 534 For Total of 1,202

Doubles and singles events of the city handicap tenpin tournament, which will come to a close Friday, started down the home stretch at the Grate Recreation and Masonic temple alleys last night.

Ted Jewell, who does his regular season bowling with the Masons "A" five, practically clinched first place in the singles when he hit 659 at the Grate drives to combine with another 659 made last week for a total of 1,318.

After leading the singles with 668 when the first half of the event ended last week, Harry Calladine faltered last night and was only able to chalk up a 534 for a total of 1,202.

Bob Wright, who rolled 637 in his first three games of the singles event, came back with a 673 in his second three to take second place behind Jewell with a total of 1,310. The doubles event was thrown into a scrambled heap when the

Lawson Little Is Eliminated

Unable To Qualify For National Open Play This Summer

Lawson Little, the stocky shot-maker who was a double winner of both the British and American amateur golf championships, will be among the missing when the national open play begins in June.

Playing at Hartford, Conn., yesterday, the long-driving Little failed to clinch one of the eight New England berths as he carried 775-152 for the 36 holes and saw six pros and two amateurs pass him by.

The downfall of Little was the most astounding upset in the sectional qualifying rounds that took place in all parts of the country.

Other players who have carved niches for themselves in the golfing world also went down. Leo Diegel, with 154, just missed at Newton Square, Pa., where Joe Kirkwood, 534, the trick shot artist, gave up the ghost after posting an 81 for the first round. Willie McFarlane, 1925 national open titleist; Jimmy Hines, third ranking money winner in last winter's campaigning and George Voigt, a walker up player, all failed to qualify at New York. Harold (Jug) McSpadden was on the outside with Little.

Johnny Goodman of Omaha, one of the best amateurs in the country, led the qualifiers in the Omaha district and Johnny Revolta and Tommy Armour finished in that order at Chicago with 143 and 145 respectively.

St. Louis Team Cops Derby Bowling Title

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 12.—The Budweiser team of St. Louis Mo., copped first prize of $500 in the derby festival bowling tournament which closed here yesterday.

The Budweisers, who rolled here two weeks ago, hung up a score of 3,083. Next to the St. Louis team were the Waldorf Golden Bocks of Cleveland, with 3,057.

The new champions succeed the Waldorf Lagers of Cleveland, winners of the first derby bowling tournament last year.

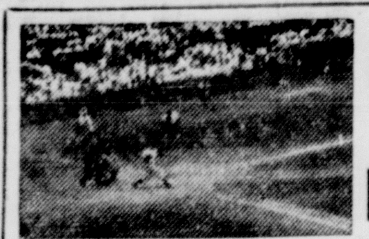

A. Nathe of St. Louis won the all-events with 2,632. F. Votel of Cincinnati took the singles crown with 715 and the St. Louis pair of Nathe and F. Boehm were high in the doubles with 1,313.

H. Sanders of Middletown, O., was third in the singles with 703. Sinks of Chicago was second with 704.

Waterloo Wonders Coach Is Replaced

IRONTON, May 12.—Ernest Miller was named by the Waterloo school board, it was learned today, to succeed Magellan Hairston, high school principal and coach of the famous Waterloo Wonders' basketball team which won the state Class B championship in 1934 and 1935. Hairston accompanied the team last winter on a barnstorming tour of some 50 games.

It was learned also that county school Superintendent Stanley C. Neal had not signed diplomas of two members of the original team. Beryl Drummond and Wynan Roberts. Both students transferred to Decatur township school.

FOREMEN GAIN 2ND LOOP WIN

Unlimber Big Guns to Defeat Nihil Shoes In Class A Game

Mullins Foremen unlimbered their big guns and used them to advantage for the first time this season yesterday as they hammered out an 18-2 victory over Nihil Shoes in a Class A league softball game at Centennial park.

With Jerome Kaiser and Jim Alaback blasting home runs to lead the attack, the Foremen collected 15 hits during the contest and combined these with 10 of Nihil's errors to win in a romp.

The Foremen opened up with three runs in the first inning and then added scores in every frame but the eighth and ninth, with their biggest sprees coming in the second and fourth when they brought four runs across the plate.

Both In Fourth
The Shoemen scored both of their runs in the fourth inning as a result of a homer by Dermatta.

Alaback and Earl McNamee saw mound duty for the Foremen and granted the Nihil batters seven hits. It was the first time this season that McNamee has been in the box.

Jim Fitzpatrick and Pat Bolen also leaned heavily on the bat for the Foremen.

The victory was the second of the season for the Foremen, who dropped the Hardware nine in their opening game of the campaign last week.

The Columbians, newcomers to the Class B league, suffered their second set-back of the season on the lower diamond at the park yesterday when they lost out to the Friends, 5-2.

The Friends scored one run in the first, tallied twice in the third and added two more in the fourth while the Columbians who were granted only two hits by Pitcher Allen of the Friends, broke into the scoring column only in the seventh inning.

Riley of the Friends banged out a long one to get a full trip around the bases during the contest.

ZEP HINDENBURG FLIES HOMEWARD

Heads Out Across Atlantic Ocean With 48 Passengers

(By Associated Press)
LAKEHURST, N. J., May 12—A new "Hindenburg line" was being drawn today—but this Hindenburg was a silver queen of commerce, and the line was being drawn across the skies between Lakehurst and Frankfurt-on-Main, Germany.

With 48 passengers aboard, the huge zeppelin which spanned the Atlantic so swiftly last week, lifted her stubby nose toward stars that shuddered a cool spring night, made a hurried courtesy call on New York City, and then headed out over the Atlantic.

The Hindenburg was starting the return journey of the first of ten round trips planned for the summer between Germany and the United States—trips which Dr. Hugo Eckener, president of the zeppelin company, hopes will bring the establishment of a permanent German-American commerce in the North Atlantic skies.

Lodge Is Pushing Mardi Gras Plans

At a meeting of the Knights of Pythias last night further arrangements were completed for the big Mardi Gras and European circus which that organization is bringing to Salem May 23 to 30.

One of the major activities connected with the event which went into action last night was the operation of a boys and girl's contest by the social committee of the Ladies of the Knights of Pythias of which Mrs. Thomas Young is chairman and Mrs. Ruth Black, Mrs. Apple, Mrs. Edgerton and Mrs. Flick are members.

The women have taken over the operation of the contests which are open to every boy and girl in Salem, who may learn of the details by communicating with Mrs. Young at the Pythian hall. The award to the winner of the boys' contest is a bicycle and the girl's a diamond ring.

The ladies will also have charge of the eating stand at the Mardi Gras.

The awards to the boys and girls will be made at the Mardi Gras and they will have a chance to see the big free act at a special performance which will be given especially for the contestants.

SEARCH FOR MAN IN YWCA MURDER

Believe Disguised Man May Have Killed Woman In Hotel

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, May 12—A hunt for a man in women's clothing was pressed today in a new effort to solve the enigmatic slaying of Mrs. Lillian Guild.

Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan ordered the search after investigators suggested a man in feminine attire might have entered the Y. W. C. A. hotel early last Saturday, ascended to Mrs. Guild's room and killed her with repeated blows of a heavy paving block.

He assigned policemen to question employees of the hotel in an attempt to ascertain whether any guest of man's appearance had been seen there after Friday midnight.

Studies Crime
Meanwhile, every available means of scientific crime detection was employed. Dr. Clarence Muhlbarger studied these bits of evidence in his laboratory—a 20-foot length of wire and a blood-spotted brick found in the death room, a tuft of graying brown hair that was clutched in the victim's hands, fingerprints taken from a flat iron in the room, a crude knife picked up near the slaying scene.

He also analyzed parings from the fingernails of 51 men—most of them casuals who loiter in nearby Grant park—for traces of brick dust, insulation, flesh, hair or blood.

An inquest into the death of Mrs. Guild, 50-year-old dealer in antiques, was continued until June 12.

Raymond Furr, 22, who came here from Memphis, Tenn., showed officials a window he had knocked out with his fist early Saturday. The injury had prompted investigators to question him but they indicated Furr and a companion, Isaac Roy Hess, would be released.

TIED FOR LEAD IN MINOR LOOP

Zanesville and Charleston Each Have Won Five Games, Lost One

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, May 12—Charleston's Senators moved into a first-place Mid-Atlantic league tie with the idle Zanesville Greys today, each team having won five games and lost one.

Although the Huntington Red Birds made 15 hits—two more than the Senators—they also made five errors and the Senators made it five in a row last night, 15 to 7. Canton moved into a tie with the idle Akron Yankees for third place by defeating the Johnstown Jaws, 10 to 8. Akron and Canton, prime rivals, have won and lost three apiece.

Dooley of Portsmouth, coming up after his team had scored a run in the ninth, slapped out a double with the bases full, scoring three men and winning the game against Dayton, 6 to 4.

The Zanesville-Akron double-header Sunday gave them a rest last night. Canton's business manager, J. S. Hinchman, announced two pitchers from Norfolk, Va., of the Class B Piedmont league, would join the team on option in Huntington today. They are Gay, a southpaw, and Haley. Hinchman released Hayden Shupe and Joe Scott, both pitchers, to make way.

THEATER Attractions

The wise cracking sleuth team of hard boiled Inspector Oscar Piper and spunky Hildgarde Withers is back, this time in a comedy mystery film, "Murder on the Bridge Path." Helen Broderick replaces Edna May Oliver in playing Miss Withers and James Gleason continues as Piper in the Stuart Palmer stories which have included "The Penguin Pool Murder," "Murder on a Honey-moon" and "Murder on the Black-board."

Miss Broderick, a popular comedian from the New York stage who was last seen here in "Love on a Bet" should make the comedy moments well worth while as she has an unusual flair for putting across a joke. "Murder on the Bridge Path" will be shown at the State Wednesday and Thursday on a double bill.

Blonde Trouble
George Brent has blonde trouble in "Snowed Under," the co-feature. The three young ladies who cause him plenty of trouble are Genevieve Tobin, Glenda Farrell and Patricia Ellis. Frank McHugh adds to the comedy.

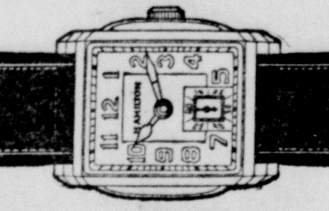

Brent has the role of a playwright who has promised a drama to a New York producer but is unable to get an idea for the last act. Miss Tobin, his divorced wife, comes to the rescue, as she has some talent in the literary field. They go to Brent's retreat, a Connecticut farmhouse, where they can work in peace.

Glenda Farrell, Brent's second wife, who is clamoring for alimony, comes to the house. With her is a lawyer, John Eldredge, and the sheriff, Frank McHugh. And last, just before a blizzard sets in, Patricia Ellis, in the role of a pretty coed who is madly infatuated with Brent, arrives.

And They All Live Happy, Etc. Miss Tobin tries to win back the affections of her ex-husband, while Miss Farrell casts eyes at the sheriff and Miss Ellis finds a new love in the young lawyer, Eldredge. "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" will be shown at the State tonight for the last time. This all-
